Roseburg, Oregon

Roseburg is situated at the heart of the Hundred Valleys of the Umpqua in scenic, Southwestern Oregon. The elevation is 465 feet, and features a mild, fair seasonal climate. Winters are cool without much freezing and provide most of the rainfall that brings blossom-filled springs. A warming trend begins in April and May, continuing into the summery days of July and August. Fall weather is pleasant and crisp, producing brilliant leaf colors in late October. The Hundred Valleys of the Umpqua have been compared geographically and climatologically with Italy and Southern France. Extremes of heat and cold are rare. The summer humidity is low, and snowfall is rare on the valley floor. The normal growing season is 217 days. Roseburg is the county seat and largest city in Douglas County. The population is 24,915 with an urban daytime population of approximately 60,000. Roseburg is the hub of retail, government activity, and medical services for Central Douglas County. The City is served by Roseburg School District #4, which has an excellent reputation and community support. Umpqua Community College is 5 miles north of the City and offers a varied curriculum with extensive adult education and community-oriented classes. Multiple locations at the college are available for cultural activities, and there is a thriving community theater group with its own venue in a city park. The city boasts numerous park areas, including tennis courts, soccer, and ball fields, a 9-hole golf course, skate park, disc golf course, dog park, and walking trails. Roseburg is the location of choice for many who seek a high-quality living environment at a reasonable price. Various community events, including Graffiti Week, Art and Wine Festivals, and Music on the Half Shell, among others, are held throughout the year for residents and tourists. Roseburg's economy has diversified in recent years while still retaining strong ties to its natural resource base.
