

Abigail Chase

University of Portland

Civic Engineering

My name is Abigail Chase, and this coming year I will be a senior Civil Engineering student at the University of Portland. I am from Wilsonville just south of Portland. I have amazing family, great friends, and so far an outstanding education that has provided me with countless opportunities and open doors.

At University of Portland, I have involved myself with clubs and extra-curricular activities that excite me and challenge me. Some of these include being the treasurer for our ASCE club, project manager for our Global Engineering Initiative club, an intern for DOWL, a civil and water resources engineering firm with a local office, and a Dundon-Berchtold Scholar this upcoming school year, where I will be working alongside faculty and other students to implement and bring awareness to ethical and moral issues related to our major.

I am excited to be on the brink of completing my undergraduate studies. I have seized these last three years and plan to continue to in this upcoming year. My education is invaluable to me, and I am so grateful to APWA for a scholarship that will be put toward it. After graduating, I plan to travel to places I have never been before, and then settle down and start working for a water resources engineering firm, where I can grow and learn alongside incredible people in the industry.

Thank you again for your support in my pursuit of a degree from an incredible university.
Go Pilots!