

Amy Huddleston

Portland State University (Geotechnical)

I am the mother of three teenagers, and I am returning to college after spending 19 years raising my family (including seven years of homeschooling my children.) I got my first bachelor's degree in mathematics from Willamette University in the 1980s, and intend to complete a BS in civil engineering at Portland State University in 2013. I work part time at Mt. Hood Community College tutoring math and physics and I spent the last school year volunteering part time with the City of Troutdale in the Public Works department.
